Many web documents (such as JAVA FAQs) are being replicated on the Internet. Often entire document collections (such as hyperlinked Linux manuals) are being replicated many times. In this paper, we make the case for identifying replicated documents and collections to improve web crawlers, archivers, and ranking functions used in search engines. The paper describes how to efficiently identify replicated documents and hyperlinked document collections. The challenge is to identify these replicas ...

We have designed and implemented new Web browsing facilities to support effective navigation on Personal Digital Assistants (PDAs) with limited capabilities: low bandwidth, small display, and slow CPU. The implementation supports wireless browsing from 3Com's Palm Pilot. An HTTP proxy fetches web pages on the client's behalf and dynamically generates summary views to be transmitted to the client. These summaries represent both the link structure and contents of a set of web pages, using infor ...

The Web is a rich source of information, but this information is scattered and hidden in the diversity of web pages. Search engines are windows to the web. However, the current search engines, designed to identify pages with specified phrases have very limited power. For example, they cannot search for phrases related in a particular way (e.g. books and their authors). In this paper we present a solution for identifying a set of inter-related information on the web using the

The cycle time of an Internet based online shopper includes time at an electronic commerce (e-commerce) server to gather information and purchase products, download time to transfer data over the Internet, and think time for interpreting the results of individual requests. Currently most home based shoppers are limited to 56.6K modems and have cycle times largely determined by download time. Mega-bit (Mb) modems will soon be commonplace and will cause a significant reduction in the download time ...

With the term information superhighway being bandied about as the latest political buzzword and the newest computing cliche, people who search for information electronically have to wonder if the global network of networks known as the Internet is the realization of this newest technological legend or just a precursor better relegated to terminology like the information bike path. First-time users of Internet services like e-mail, Archie, Anonymous FTP and Gopher may marvel at the unprece ...

When your department is named Information Systems and you see an article entitled "Is Information Systems Spending Productive?" you tend to sit up and take notice. Such an article appeared in The MIT Report of July/August 1993, summarizing a study by Erik Brynjolfsson, Professor of Management at the Sloan School, and graduate student Lorin Hitt. Their study dealt with the relationship between a company's spending on information systems and its productivity. In a recent interview, Brynjolfsson an ...
